

Collaborative sites taking off in L&S courses

April 29, 2010 by L&S News Team

Share: Like

Related Content

Innovative iPad pilot study aids teaching and learning in L&S

#UWRightNow: Documenting a day in the life of UW-Madison

Teaching with Technology Instructor Seminar Series 2011-2012

Instructor Seminar Series: "Fostering Online Discussions" on November 17

Live in Van Hise: Lens on the Collection

About the writer

News and information produced and curated by staff in the College of Letters & Science.

More by L&S News Team

As the pilot program for Collaborative Sites continues to grow, L&S instructors are exploring new ways to foster online interaction in their courses.

Collaborative Sites available through L&S Learning Support Services.

This semester, L&S instructors using Collaborative Sites created a wide range of online interactions for their students, including:

- FaceBook-style status updates and media sharing in Italian 102 and ILS 480
- Group blogging and case-study analysis in Communicative Disorders 706
- Peer critique and resource sharing in CommArts 262
- Group-based literary analysis in East Asian 671 and Scandinavian Studies 432

L&S courses using Collaborative Sites will be featured at two upcoming events:

- Introduction to Collaborative Sites for Learning Language, Literature, and Culture – Brown Bag, April 14 at Noon in 254 Van Hise
- Integrating Online Learning in Face-To-Face Classrooms – presentation at the 2010 Teaching and Learning Symposium, May 19 at 10 am. Pyle Center DE232

Collaborative Sites are designed and developed by L&S Learning Support Services for a limited number of L&S instructors each semester.

For more information, see <http://lss.wisc.edu/collaborative-sites> or contact Doug Worsham at doug@lss.wisc.edu or Sue Weier at sue@lss.wisc.edu with L&S Learning Support Services.

IN FOCUS

Scholz named dean of Letters & Science

John Karl Scholz, Nellie June Gray Professor of Economic Policy and chair of the Department of Economics at UW-Madison, has been selected as the next dean of the College of Letters & Science. View All

HUMANITIES & THE ARTS

Two new grants help Odyssey Project expand

The grants will support a new program, "Odyssey Bridges," aimed at providing expanded services to help more low income adults complete college degrees. View All

SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY

Chemistry team delves into climate puzzle with push of button

As UW-Madison graduate student Jen Kaiser settles into life in Smyrna, Tenn., this summer, her days develop a rhythm. View All

RESEARCH

Center for Limnology study suggests some fishing regulations don't match reality

A new study by University of Wisconsin-Madison Center for Limnology researchers says that when it comes to managing sport fisheries, regulations aren't in line with the reality of some fishing trips. View All

About College of Letters & Science

The College of Letters & Science teaches students to make a good living and lead a good life. We are the largest academic unit at UW-Madison and the heart of this great institution. L&S is home to more than 800 faculty, 22,000 undergraduate and graduate students and 190,000 living alumni.

Subscribe

Subscribe to our daily news email.

Email:  Join

About the L&S News Team

News from the College of Letters & Science brings you timely and relevant stories that impact your life. We bring you news from the classroom, the laboratory, from the community and the world. Contact us or read more about our team.